Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Candid View of the Presidential Question Andrew Jackson was the son of a farmer, who died while his children were young, bequeathing to them little more than a spotless name. Before he was fifteen years of age, with the enthusiasm which has always marked his career, Jackson enrolled himself with his two brothers, in the ranks of the Revolutionary army. His eldest brother died soon after on the field of battle; the other sunk under the effects of a neglected sabre-wound; and his mother yielding to the pressure of her sorrows, shortly followed them to the grave. Andrew Jackson was thus left at an early age without a protector, and almost without a kinsman. After a service, distinguished for its fidelity and spirit, where all were faithful and gallant, he left the camp, and applied himself assiduously to the study of the law. He had been admitted to the bar of North Carolina, when in 1788, he took up his abode in the then wilderness of Tennessee. His strong manly sense, his integrity and warmth of heart, soon gathered a circle of friends around him, of the blunt yeomanry of that district: he imbibed their frank and generous spirit; and perhaps partook of their faults. It is said, that in early life, he was fond of the sports of the field, and that he so far yielded to the false notions of honour by which the western states are yet distinguished, as to take part in a duel. Years of patriotic service, and of uninterrupted regard to the obligations of piety have not been sufficient, in the estimation of some among us, to wipe out...
