ViolinViola Studio of Kirkland, Inc., United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Violist Althea Stewart, a former L.A. musician, divorced and in her early forties, convinces her best friend Grace Sullivan, also newly divorced, to give up her struggling career as a Hollywood studio cellist, follow in her own footsteps, and move to the Pacific Northwest to open a music school in a rambling old mansion, Blanchard House, in Kirkland, Washington. The lavish pre-Christmas tea, which they host for relocated L.A. musicians, becomes the scene of a well-planned murder, the poisoning death of Marvin Pratt, a retired concertmaster, who has a fatal seizure while driving home from their party. His wife, Annabelle, a well-known violinist, is also severely injured in the crash. Many musicians who attended the tea had good reasons to have hated Marvin Pratt, it turns out, from his less-than-exemplary private life to his unscrupulous business dealings. Althea soon realizes that some of her oldest friends may be suspected of the crime due to hitherto unknown ties to the deceased. Althea herself comes to the attention of Detective Harry Demetrious of Kirkland P.D. as a possible suspect. Demetrious is handsome, witty, and is quickly charmed by Althea s quirky personality and auburn-haired good looks. The feeling seems to be mutual. Althea has been slow to recover from the pain of abandonment by her former husband, alcoholic violinist Dennis Littleton, and his swift remarriage. Althea is informed by the police detective that Annabelle Pratt has inexplicably listed her as next of kin at the accident site. Althea and Grace drive to the Pratt s home in Seattle to rescue Annabelle s cat, learning more about the private lives of these two people in the process....
