Not illustrated. 1869 Excerpt: . revenue of about 3 per cent, on the probable cost of the railway. 50. The Government of India have expressed their opinion that while it Question of Agene s not for tne interest of Government, on account -- of the cost of management, to divide the railways of India among Companies in shorter lengths than 500 miles, it is not on the other hand expedient to entrust to any one Company more than 1,000 miles. The concession of the proposed extension through Rajpootana to Delhi and Agra, to the Baroda Railway Company would increase the length of their lines with the branches that must sooner or later be constructed in Guzerat to about 1,000 miles. There is consequently no objection to the grant of the concession to that Company on the grounds deprecated by the Government of India, but tliere are objections due partly to the constitution of the Home Board, and partly to the position of the proposed lines. The present Home Board have not evinced an interest in keeping down expenditure, and the excessive cost of the constructed line is due in part to mismanagement which they were not very ready to rectify. The portion of the extensions east of Ajmere will have more the character of branches of the East indian Railway than of feeders of a system of lines converging on Bombay. The heavy sugar and salt trade of Rajpootana will be worked in connection with the East Indian, not with...
