Reviews

The most effective ebook i possibly go through. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. Its been designed in an extremely basic way and it is just after i finished reading this ebook by which basically transformed me, modify the way i believe.

Not illustrated. 1913 Excerpt: . . . pamphlets, exclusive of current periodicals, magazines and records of observations. About fifty periodicals and registers of observations are received quarterly or oftener. The total number of books and pamphlets approximates 23, 000. In the new library there are 3800 books and 11, 000 pamphlets, and in the climatological library, 4100 books and 3950 pamphlets. The publications of the Observatory are sent to 340 institutions and individuals throughout the world. The address of the Observatory is Readville, Mass. ALEXANDER McADIE. EXPLANATION OF TABLES I TO XIII Tables I and V contain the eye-observations made at the summit at 8 A. m. and 8 P. m. , arranged in the international form. The wind-velocity, however, is given in metres per second, instead of its force on a scale of 0 to 12; and some slight deviations from the original form which are found in foreign publications are adopted here and in Tables II, VI, and X. Following the recommendation of the Paris Conference of 1896, distant thunder and lightning have been noted separately in the Remarks, and in Tables II and VI the days with thunderstorms include only storms in which both thunder and lightning were observed. While the data appear in metric units, practical considerations have led to the retention of Fahrenheit degrees in the temperature-tables. Tables II and VI contain summaries for the years, arranged also in the international form, with the data expressed in both English and metric measures and Centigrade as well as Fahrenheit...
